Louisiana Repeals the Sales Tax

A Warning to Modify Our Own Taxes

The Arkansas Democrat, which has steadily campaigned for repeal of the state's 2 per cent sales tax, says in an editorial Tuesday that the State of Louisiana on December 31 will cease paying sales tax, being the eighth commonwealth to try it and then repeal it. The other seven states repealing it are: New York, Vermont, New Jersey, Idaho, Kentucky, Maryland and Oregon.

New Names in Judge Contest Are Challenged

Luck's Demurrer Overruled, Wilson Revises His Complaint

In Nevada circuit court at Prescott Tuesday Judge Dexter Bush overruled a demurrer filed by Attorney John P. Vesey, in Fred Luck's behalf, asking that the Hempstead county judge's contest filed by John L. Wilson be dismissed.

Attorney Vesey based his allegations on the fact that the complaint filed by Wilson failed to state a cause of action. Two motions, stating that Wilson failed to file a cross-motion and failure to have the summons issued within 10 days after the date of certification of nomination, were also dismissed.

Judge Bush then set the trial for the first week of the Hempstead Circuit Court session, which begins here October 7, pending a reply from Attorney Vesey.

Mr. Luck was certified by the Hempstead central committee as county judge, by a nine vote margin, Saturday August 31. The unofficial count had previously given Mr. Wilson a three vote lead. However the official count showed errors in three boxes in Mr. Luck's favor overturning the count.

Meanwhile, an amended complaint challenging additional voters in the run-off primary election has been filed by Mr. Wilson. The amended complaint recites:

Atkins Estimates Proposed Light Rate Cut to Be $10,000

A proposed cut in the electric rates of the municipally-owned water & light plant, based on the new low cost of fuel gas for the municipal plant's boilers, was submitted to the Hope City Council at an executive meeting Tuesday night by Mayor W. S. Atkins.

The proposed reduction, estimated to be worth $10,000 a year, follows the connecting of the municipal plant Monday, September 23, with the new gas line of the Louisiana-Nevada Transit company. The new gas company's rate to the Hope municipal plant is 10 cents flat per thousand cubic feet, against a sliding scale rate under the old Arkansas Louisiana Gas company contract which has just expired. The city plant saves an estimated $8,000 a year under the new gas rate.

The change-over in gas lines was made at 9 o'clock Monday morning, the city plant operating for a two-hour period on the emergency oil-burner system until the new gas connection had been completed.

Mayor Atkins made his light rate proposal at a closed meeting of the city council Tuesday night, following which the aldermen took the schedule under advisement. They agreed to discuss it with the citizens and report back at a later meeting.

Atkins Statement
The full text of the mayor's statement to the council follows:
"The most valuable asset to the City of Hope is the City owned and operated, Water and Light Plant. As a result of the businesslike management of this institution, the city occupies the enviable position of a 'debt free city.'"
"The theory of operating Government owned, Public Utilities is to operate them at cost plus a small reserve for emergencies. This theory has not been followed to the letter in the operation of the Hope Plant, neither has the theory of operating for a large profit been followed, but the rate charged has been in line with the rate charged in other cities in the state, which has enabled the city to build and pay for the City Hall, which is a credit to any city the size of Hope, and to furnish free service for the 'White Way System,' and to the City Schools.

"This system seems to have met with the approval of a majority of the citizens and tax payers of the city. It is the most satisfactory system for operating the City Government. When the city can take care of all the requirements of the City Government, and not be compelled to resort to a bond issue, an occupation tax, or incur indebtedness, and operate on a rate, for the services rendered by the plant, which is in line with the rate charged by private corporations, operating and furnishing similar services, and at the same time render all the free service that is furnished, it certainly presents an ideal Governmental system which cannot be improved upon.

Saving on Gas
"Our city has increased in population 24 1/2 percent during the past decade. This has increased the volume of business of the Water and Light Plant, and a recent deal with respect to fuel for the plant will save the city approximately six thousand dollars ($6,000) per year. In view of these facts, I favor the time to make a reduction in the electric current rate of our plant.

"I have made a careful study of the present rate, as compared with rates of other cities similar in size to the City of Hope, and of the effect of a

Ouachita Plays at El Dorado

Meets Louisiana Tech There at 8 p. m. Thursday

Ouachita college and Louisiana Tech will resume a rivalry of years ago this Thursday night at 8 o'clock when they meet on Rowland field at El Dorado.

Hope alumni of Ouachita will drive over to the oil city. Ouachita students and the college band will go by special train; and the Louisiana Tech student body and band will come up to El Dorado in a motor caravan.

Fifteen years ago Ouachita and Louisiana Tech met on the neutral battlefield at El Dorado every year, but this is the first time the rivalry has been resumed since the '20's.

When G. F. Golden of Spring Hill reported to The Star last week he had a tomato-vine 17 feet high he brought to a climax the argument that has been going on between Oscar Fenwick and some of our champion Hempstead county vegetable growers. The argument started when John Griffith, of Hopewell, reported he had 60 pumpkins on a vine 200 feet long. Right then Oscar started talking. The Star couldn't get into an argument over a 200-foot pumpkin-vine, because to photograph that sort of thing you would need a wide-angle lens on top of an oil derrick.

But when Golden came in with his story about the 17-foot tomato vine he had something we could check up on with the camera.

And so last Saturday your editor got Managing Editor Paul Jones, Oscar Fenwick, and the cameras into a car and drove down to Golden's place. And here are the pictures:

AT LEFT — Oscar Fenwick measuring the tomato-vine. It was actually 15 feet high.

AT RIGHT — Oscar Fenwick and G. F. Golden at the top of the ladder. Golden is measuring, and Oscar is arguing.

Seriously, Golden's huge plant is a Burgess Triple-Crop Climbing Tomato, obtained from the Burgess Seed & Plant Co., Galesburg, Mich. It was planted in the crater of an old tree-stump and carefully fertilized with alternate layers of new ground and barnyard manure. The plant is loaded with tomatoes, all of them being visible in the original photographs, somewhat obscured during the engraving process for publication.

Poll Tax Final to Be Monday

Receipts Issued Thereafter Ineligible to Vote

The deadline to pay taxes without penalty and delinquent publication costs, and to obtain a voting pole tax, is Monday, September 30, Sheriff and Collector G. E. Baker warned the public Wednesday.

Poll tax receipts issued after midnight Monday, Mr. Baker said, are ineligible for voting in the November general election and in the City of Hope primary election this fall.

Taxes paid after Monday must include penalty and the cost of publication in the delinquent tax list.

The sheriff reported tax payments to be approximately equal to last year at this time, but poll tax receipts are way off.

Mr. Baker said that the total of tax accounts settled for 1939 up to September 25, 1939, was 4,400, while the total of accounts for 1939 settled up to noon this Wednesday, September 25, 1940, is 4,379.

Poll tax receipts issued up to a year ago totaled 5,202, while poll tax receipts issued up to noon this Wednesday totaled only 3,266.

Reports Say African City Surrendered

However Reports Unconfirmed and Civilian Toll Mounts

VICHY — (P) — Unconfirmed and conflicting reports that Dakar, capital of French West Africa, had surrendered to the "Free French" and the British expedition were circulated here Wednesday.

It was not learned with certainty whether the city was still holding out, or whether expeditionary troops had gained a foothold on the African coastline.

No official news from Dakar has been announced since Tuesday when the British were reported to be starting a violent raid.

Details reaching the French Admiralty said that violent fighting in the afternoon, Tuesday, at Dakar resulted with considerable great number of victims and more damage to the city than the British morning action which killed 145 and wounded 363.

A naval ministry communique said that civilian casualties included 63 dead and 255 injured.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Elden Auker led the Cleveland Indians to six hits in a 7-to-2 St. Louis victory Tuesday which put the Tigers a game and a half behind the Indians.

The Browns were held in check by Mel Harder until the Cleveland right-hander was removed for a pinch-hitter with the score tied, 2 to 2 in the sixth. The Browns hit Harry Eisenstat and Johnny Allen for the winning runs.

About 1,000 customers saw Auker beat the Indians for the fifth time in seven starts this year, and aid his own cause with two singles which left Cleveland pennant hopes gloomy.

The New York Yankees won a double-header from the Washington Senators Tuesday while the Cleveland Indians were losing to the St. Louis Browns 7-to-2 and the Detroit Tigers were idle. This lifted the third place Yankees to within two and one-half games of Detroit and within one game of the second place Indians. The Yanks have six more games to play with the Washington Senators and Philadelphia Senators and Philadelphia Athletics. They would have to win them all and the Tigers lose two to finish in a tie.

OUR COUNTRY

Organize for Liberty, Pleads John Dos Passos, Who Sees Danger to Nation at Home

Fifteenth of 24 articles on "Our Country," written exclusively for NEA Service by the nation's most famous authors.

Author of "U. S. A.," "The Big Money," "Adventures of a Young Man," from across the Atlantic: It is the danger that threatens us most is not incomplete organization at home.

The breakdown of the 19th century system has caught the United States in a difficult stage of transition. We have no choice but to go forward, if necessary completing our reorganization under fire. No matter what kind of economic system is eventually set up, it must work towards the same basic aims for which the Union was founded. It is around the core of respect for the rights and liberties of the individual man that all our institutions have grown up. To bring the life of every American back into sharp relation to this central principle we need words as freshly accurate as those of '76, and state-building as rapid, energetic and original as that of the convention that laid down our Constitution.

I think that if we could look at the development of American government under the New Deal as if it were 10 years off, liberals and Tories alike would be forced to admit that more useful building has been done than they have been willing to see. To put the republic into a state of defense we must organize for liberty or else there'll be no republic to defend. The job before us is to make every man's liberty and every man's inventiveness and push work efficiently in the frame of close-knit industrial organization. We've got to prove that machine-production in war or peace can better serve the ends of liberty than the ends of tyranny.

It is a great and terrible moment. Every selfish and power-minded group in the country is going to try to use the confusion for its own ends. At a time when what we need most is clear heads and the will to sacrifice private prejudices and interests for the common good, men in high office and low are ruining the record of their otherwise useful lives by a panic scrapping of every principle they were formerly up to the mob against what ever minority seems weakest and least popular. Much more than the German military-industrial machine's vast successes in Europe, we have reason to fear weak nerves in public life at a time when we need every kind of courage, but particularly civic courage.

John Dos Passos

It is civic courage and civil liberty that will beat the European and Asiatic hordes abroad and at home and firmly establish this republic of free men in the new world that is being hacked out in cruelty and bloodshed. An American monopolist's despotism will not succeed in saving America any more than the poor rotten French businessman's republic succeeded in saving France.

What will be saved out of the wreck of the British financial empire will be saved not by the smooth bankers of Threadneedle Street, but by the traditional aptitude for free government of the English people as a whole. The qualities we can rely on in this struggle are just the qualities the dictators and their slaves haven't got, the qualities that have made our country in spite of shortsightedness and stupidity and greed, the best on earth for a man to live.

In times of great stress nations sink to their lowest common denominator. I believe that, just as the lowest common denominator of Europe has become something bad for mankind, the lowest common denominator of the peoples of North America is to the good and that it will get better. A great deal depends on the kind of leadership that can work up that lowest common denominator of habits and traditions into a usable public formula, the Jackson and Lincoln kind of leadership.

It may be that we needed just this test to make a nation out of an overgrown but still half provincial frontier republic. Anyway it has come and we must face it. If we have the nerve, if only we have the nerve to use our heads and the exuberant diversity of our land and our people and our mighty industrial plant and the experience of our state-building past, we'll pull through. We'll not only pull through, but we'll give the world an example of organized liberty that will knock Hitler's thousand years of despotism into a cocked hat, an old-out-of-date museum piece of a Napoleonic cocked hat.

Margaret Culklin Banning warns of the mental enemy that may attack our nation before a physical foe attempts conquest, in the next article of this series on "Our Country."

Nebraska Is Big 6 Choice

Huskers Have Two Backfields, 19 Lettermen

By JERRY BRONDSFELD
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Corn belt critics say this is the year Nebraska returns to the position of eminence it occupied so frequently, and more recently in the days of George Sauer and Sam Francis. Nineteen lettermen paint a rosy picture at Lincoln, giving Maj. Biff Jones a fair sort of start toward the Big Six title held by Missouri.

The defending Tigers are ranked close behind, however, and might have been installed in the role of favorites if death, injury and withdrawals hadn't cut deep into Don Faurot's plans.

A beefy, rock-ribbed line and a galaxy of backfield stars potent enough to give Nebraska two complete units, is prima facie evidence why the Cornhuskers look like winners.

Only at the ends is there a question of doubt.

Forrest Behm and Royal Kahler are great tackles, and sophomores are pushing them. Major Jones is 'two deep' at the guards, and although Bob Buttruss is no Charley Brock, he'll more than do at center.

There's plenty of dynamite in an offensive which contains Herman Herman Rohrig, Harry Hopp, Vike Francis, Bob Kahler and Cowboy Petsch.

Paul Christman Again Sparks Missouri Bid

All-America Paul Christman again sparks the Missouri bid, but the Tigers' passing-running ace doesn't have the supporting cast he had a year ago. A thigh injury, incidentally, may bother the big blond.

An infection resulted in the tragic death of Ronnie King, sophomore backfield star a year ago, but the Tigers still have veteran performers in Jim Starmer, Jerry Notowitz and Bill Cunningham.

Most of that crack Missouri line graduated. Faurot must dig up a couple of ends.

A little more strength up front and Missouri might sneak in ahead of Nebraska.

Jack Jacobs, the radiant Redskin who sparkled as a sophomore last year, and speedster Orville Matthews give Oklahoma the nucleus of a potent attack, but Tony Stidham needs too much in the forward wall to have serious championship aspirations.

Tackles and ends are particularly in demand.

Adams Takes Over at Kansas State

Kansas State, with Hobbs Adams now at the helm, is seen as a trouble-maker, with 17 lettermen on hand, but the Wildcats require backfield strength. The line should be as tough as any in the league.

Adams, who succeeded Wes Felt, was Howard Harding Jones' right-hand man at Southern California.

Iowa State will settle for a 50-50 season right now, Kansas, unless it pulls a few rabbits out of the hat, may wind up in the cellar.

In the Missouri Valley Conference, Oklahoma A. & M. has enough talent for two crack teams.

Washington University of St. Louis and Creighton are formidable enough to make it a three-way fight.

Tulsa is studded with juniors who will make a lot of trouble. Drake needs backs desperately.

St. Louis is rebuilding under Dukes Dufford.

This is Washburn's final whirl in the circuit.

The Ichabods haven't much, which is why they are chucking it all.

Arnold Expected to Start Trust Action Shortly

WASHINGTON — The National Defense Commission's blast at Thursday Arnold's proposed anti-trust action in the oil industry was a lot less drastic than some of the people in the anti-trust division had feared.

The commission reported to Attorney General Jackson that the oil suit might "becloud relationships between the government and industry" in connection with defense, but it pointedly did not ask that the action be dropped. Instead, it left the whole matter up to Jackson.

As a result, the betting now is that the suit will be filed in the very near future. Instead of asking that 22 major oil companies be forced to get rid of their pipe lines and marketing facilities, it might simply ask the court to grant such relief as the facts warrant. The general effect, however, would be much the same.

Too Late For Senate Quiz
If it hadn't been for an odd chain of circumstances, the senate would long since have held exhaustive public hearings on the very point Arnold is now seeking to attack in open court—the question whether pipe line and marketing facilities owned by the big oil companies do not tend to kill competition and raise prices to the consumer.

Nearly two years ago Senator Gillette of Iowa put in a bill to divorce the oil companies from their marketing facilities. He was all set to open public hearings when the late Senator Borah asked him to hold it. Borah had a bill to make them give up their pipe lines, and he suggested the two bills be consolidated and hearings held on both matters at once.

Gillette agreed. Then Borah got tied up. First with the Temporary National Economic Committee and then with the neutrality fight, and hearings were postponed. Finally Borah died. Gillette in April arranged to open hearings. Only to find Arnold was preparing to cover the same field with an anti-trust suit. Agreement then was that the senate hearings would be postponed until Arnold's suit was filed.

With congress due to quit in a week or so, it's too late for the hearings now.

87 Voters—Four Residents
Senator Gillette, meanwhile, is due to put in a busy autumn as head of the senate's campaign investigating committee. Preliminary studies of alleged election irregularities in certain eastern states have indicated that the committee is likely to strike pay dirt—in the literal meaning of the term—when it starts open hearings.

At the moment the spots which seem due to provide most of the entertainment are New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Over in Boss Hague's backwash, for instance, committee investigators discovered 87 persons had voted from one city apartment. They went around to the apartment and got from the janitor an affidavit that for five years no more than four persons had lived there.

They also uncovered a traveling ring of "floater" voters—casuals who would vote first in Philadelphia, then in Camden, and then down the river in Wilmington. Additional cases of citizens who maintained voting rights—and exercised them—in Philadelphia and Camden simultaneously have come to light.

With a presidential election coming closer every day, this will be tough stuff to be spreading on the front pages. Politicians who have been trying vainly to bury the whole mess have at least the comfort that the material is likely to spatter both parties alike.

SERIAL STORY

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

All characters, organizations and incidents of this serial are entirely fictitious.

YESTERDAY: Sue Mary came through the whole adventure without a scratch. But she was a changed girl. She was a different person.

NICK PREDICTS TROUBLE

CHAPTER XV

HER eyes newly opened, as it were, to the undercurrents about her, Sue Mary doggedly concentrated on her work at the office while in her secret mind she tried to discover what goal Vera was working towards.

Across from her Kitty, too, watched. Her eyes took in every detail of Vera's cool black sheer, with the starched ruffled collar; the severe black braids coiled around her head; the red slash of lips across the tanned face.

Kitty watched Vera because a few moments ago young Ross Clark had come in the office. He always kidded the girls, teased Miss Grant and issued the briefest possible orders before dashing out again.

But today he had stopped at Vera's desk and the low murmur of their voices came to Kitty and Sue Mary. Kitty sat frozen, her face pale except for two crimson spots that flamed the red in her candy-stained wash. With her black curls piled high on her head in one of her newest hairstyles she looked like an angry-eyed doll.

Babs Fleming came over with some pencils to sharpen. "He's in here often, isn't he?" she said. "Is it because of the countess?"

"Countess?" Kitty repeated. "Well, Vera, then. Only she always reminds me of a countess. A story-book countess. Regal with braids wound about her head like a crown. And sort of an air of mystery."

"He comes in here because he's on that special committee named in the city to work on the new airport site," Kitty said dryly. "With the plane plant booming 24 hours a day and air traffic doubling here in town, the port say the old airport isn't big enough and they're trying to get a deal with the government on a new field. Besides Ross Clark is a business man the same as his father. Why shouldn't he come in the office?"

"No reason," Babs replied calmly. "And he probably could use some extra money. He's probably trying to unload some of his real estate through this airport deal. Anyway that's the talk about town."

"Talk about town—I'm sick of it," Kitty said, banging her hands down on her typewriter. "Talk around here—I'm sick of that, too."

"I'm sick of the way these government men keep snooping around here. This isn't an office anymore; it's a prison, a concentration camp. Just because the legal work for a plane and automobile factory is done here, every piece of paper has to be checked and filed and guarded."

WHAT she's sick of, Sue Mary thought, is the way young Ross Clark looks at Vera. And so that makes her sick of the whole world.

She wondered if he was trying to unload some property for an airport site. She supposed the YP group would make use of such material. The idle rich trying to milk the taxpayers by selling high-priced land for a site that could be obtained more reasonably elsewhere.

Yes, that would be right up the YP alley—particularly now that the election was in the offing. The present governor was a former law partner of old Ross Clark. The picture would fit together perfectly. He had appointed young Clark on the committee; he was running for re-election. She rubbed her forehead with an ink hand and wished that somehow she could see clearly all the ramifications. All she knew was that she sensed danger; that she couldn't yet break from Vera and Natalie and Nick. There was something that she must find out. Perhaps it was hurt pride that was driving her on. And anger at having been outmaneuvered or a desire now to prove to herself that she could stop them in whatever it was they hoped to accomplish. She wanted desperately to see Joe. She wanted to talk to him, to confess the facts she had discovered. She wanted to tell them that she had been a fool and a fool for that matter, and that she was now a different person.

Indeed, she had to go to the hall for a special moment of the campaign publicity campaign. At that, she thought, I was better than getting to the apartment where she would have to face not only Natalie but Vera and possibly Nick as well.

It was going to be hard to try and assume pose of innocence. She must pretend nothing had changed and her enthusiasm was still high; her interest still keen.

AT the hall she took notes of the meeting for the records and then afterwards, when Vera and Natalie brought out salami, cheese, olives and beer for a lunch in the office, she listened to the by-now familiar talk with a new understanding.

I was blind, she kept repeating to herself. Blind and stupid. A naive child, as Vera said. The implications made her break out into a cold sweat. She had been hearing these arguments for weeks but only now did she comprehend them.

There were no subversive elements at work within the country. None except certain government officials. And when the YP succeeded in getting Fritz King Jr. governor they would be doing it for a real service because he would immediately introduce changes in the state; changes that could well serve as models for others.

"But we have to wake the people up before we can do anything," Vera said, her face alight and her eyes searching Nick's moody face for an answering smile.

"Well we will. They'll soon see just how far money goes without man-power," Nick said. "There's going to be trouble out at the Smithsonian factory."

"The union has a new contract ready. It comes up in a week and if the company doesn't talk terms, I think there might be trouble. That outfit makes carburetors for the Gull plane and it wouldn't be helpful with all those plane orders in to have a strike at Smithsonian."

SUE MARY sat her beer glass down on the scuffed desk. Her hand shook and some of the beer spilled. She tried to keep her voice steady. Smithsonian was where Joe worked. Trouble at Smithsonian would mean trouble for Joe. "But Erik," she said when she could control herself. "I thought the union and the management were friendly at Smithsonian."

"The management wouldn't be if a picket line suddenly started up around the plant."

"But why should there be a picket line? Isn't negotiating done over a conference table?"

"Yes, little one, but maybe the workers would get impatient with the negotiators and start picketing. That has been known to happen if someone gets to the workers and tips them off as to what's going on."

Record Crowd at Revival

Auditorium Filled at Methodist Meeting

The attendance at the Revival at the Methodist Church hit a new all time high record last night. The main auditorium was practically filled, with some of the Sunday School Rooms being used to accommodate the large crowd.

The Song Service, under the direction of Mr. Martin, is proving a very valuable asset in making effective the entire service. Mr. Martin's meetings with the Young People are very inspirational, and they too have been quite well attended.

Reverend Kenneth Spore, in his sermon to the congregation last night, took for his subject, "Peter's Fall." His discussion of this biblical character of the Bible brought new viewpoints and an insight that are usually overlooked. He said there were three reasons why the downfall of Peter came about. In describing the scenes recorded in the 14th Chapter of St. Mark, the last few days of the life of Jesus, "the scene in the garden of Gethsemane is one of the most discouraging of the scenes in the Bible. When Jesus needed a friend to testify for him, Peter failed him." Reverend Spore applied this mark of character to everyday human living in the thought that so often we, as Peter, miss the opportunity of giving help where it is needed. "First, thoughtlessness was the main reason for Peter's fall. Peter had not studied enough to show himself approved. His downfall came about because of a falling faith, and that falling faith was due to the fact that he followed Jesus afar off. He did not make preparation to meet temptation when it came. So are we failing oftentimes to prepare ourselves for needed strength in time of emergency. Secondly, Peter was suffering from an exaggerated self-confidence. He was too weak to take a stand, though he had assured the Master when He questioned him about his deep regard for him, that he loved Him devotedly. Third, temptation found Peter in the ebb of his devotion. He did not keep up his devotion because he followed him too far off. One of the contributory causes of Peter's fall was evil companions. What a change in the World's history there might have been had Peter acted differently at that one time."

Reverend Spore's sermon was sincere, admonition for sinners, saint alike for everyday, practical living. His earnestness, coupled with preparation in study of problems everyday living, is doing much toward bringing good crowds, and maintaining great interest in the meeting.

Services will be held throughout this week, at both morning and evening hours.

My Eyes from the Tangle of Myriad Conformation.

At length, one evening, some three or four days after the occurrence, we were sitting together in the same seat at the same window, and he leaning on a sofa near at hand. The association of the place and time impelled me to give him an account of the phenomenon. He heard me to the end. At this instant I again had a distinct view of the monster—to which, with a shout of absolute terror, I now directed his attention. He looked eagerly, but maintained that he saw nothing, although I designated minutely the course of the creature, as it made its way down the naked face of the hill.

I threw myself passionately back in my chair. My host, however, had in some degree resumed the calmness of his demeanor, and questioned me very rigorously in respect to the conformation of the visionary creature. When I had fully satisfied him on this head he sighed deeply and went on to talk, with what I thought a cruel calmness, of various points of speculative philosophy. I remember his insisting very especially upon the idea that the principal source of error in all human investigations lay in the liability of an understanding to underrate or over-value the importance of an object, through mere misadmeasurement of its propinquity. "To estimate properly, for example," he said, "the influence to be exercised on mankind at large by the thorough diffusion of Democracy, the distance of the epoch at which such diffusion may possibly be accomplished, should not fail to form an item in the estimate."

Upon recovering, my first impulse was of course to inform my friend of what I had seen and heard—and I can scarcely explain what feeling of repugnance it was which in the end operated to prevent me.

He paused here for a moment, stepped to a bookcase, and brought forth one of the ordinary synopses of natural history. Requesting me then to exchange seats with him, that he might the better distinguish the fine print of the volume, he took my armchair at the window.

"But for your exceeding minuteness," he said, "in describing the monster, I might never have had it in my power to demonstrate to you what it was. In the first place, let me read to you a schoolboy account of the genius Sphinx, of the family, Crepuscularia of the order Lepidoptera, of the class Insecta—or insects. The account runs thus:

"Four membranous wings covered with little colored scales of a metallic appearance; mouth forming a rolled proboscis, produced by an elongation of the jaws, upon the sides of which are found the rudiments of mandibles and downy palpi; the inferior wings retained to the superior by a stiff hair; antennae in the form of an elongated club, prismatic; abdomen much terror among the vulgar at times by the melancholy kind of cry which it utters, and the insignia of death which it wears upon its corselet."

He closed the book and leaned forward in the chair, placing himself accurately in the position which I had occupied at the moment of beholding the "monster."

"Ah, here it is!" he presently explained; "it is re-ascending the face of the hill. Still, it is by no means so large or so distant as you imagined it, for the fact is that, as it wriggles its way up this thread, which some spider has wrought along the window-sash, I find it to be about the sixteenth of an inch in its extreme length, and also about the sixteenth of an inch distant from the pupil of my eye."

British, Nazi Planes Resume Air Attacks

Sign of German, Italy, Spain, Japan Bloc Appears

LONDON—(AP)—German planes resumed over central London Wednesday, following a lull of anti-aircraft fire and were reported driven off. The explosions across the English coast signified daylight renewal of British night raids on German held invasion coast.

An exchange telegraph correspondent reported from England's south-east coast that explosions heard across the strait from Dover seemed to be the heaviest of any of the British bombings on German held coastal bases in France.

Married German bombers gave central London its worst plastering of the war Tuesday night. Some of the fires were still burning at noon Wednesday. For block after block, the city could not get away from the penetrating smell of smoke.

Ciano to Berlin
BERLIN—(AP)—Italian Foreign Minister Ciano will be on his way to Berlin by Thursday for further conferences on the Axis war program, usually well informed sources said Wednesday.

Authorized sources neither confirm nor deny that Ciano is coming soon. Political sources generally are of the opinion that Ciano will participate in some solemn ceremony of signature.

As fresh squadrons of German warplanes left continental bases for new raids on Britain, the German high command reported, that "dusk to dawn" attacks Tuesday resulted in further damage to London.

Bloc Is Evident
ROME—(AP)—A sign of a totalitarian bloc of Germany, Italy, Spain and Japan being solidified for an earth-girdling collaboration in a more active sense appeared Wednesday.

One well-informed newspaper indicated that Spain had already decided to give active aid to the Rome-Berlin Axis in the war against Britain. It was disclosed that the Japanese ambassador to Rome and Italian Foreign Minister Ciano discussed the international situation Tuesday "with particular emphasis on Japanese advance into French Indo-China."

Warn Britain
ROME—(AP)—Virginia Gayda, author of a book on the Axis, warned Britain Wednesday that she would meet with immediate counter attacks from Axis forces if she attempted to spread the war to west Africa.

Dutch Indies Will Fight

Rich Islands Ready to Battle Any Country

By PETER EDISON
Editor, NEA Service
BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies—(Nederlands Zol Heruizen)—Netherlands Will Rise Again.

Every place you go in the Dutch East Indies, you see this sign. Lapel buttons bearing this slogan are worn by all good Dutchmen. And the very air, sultry as only tropical humidity can be, breathes a certain confidence, a definiteness of purpose which is as dogged as anything the proverbial Briton can point to as a dominant national characteristic.

For the Dutch out here are determined they shall not be caught short, the way their motherland was when the Germans marched into Holland last May.

They are preparing to face any enemy—a conquering Germany of today, or an aggressive Japan tomorrow. From Sumatra, through Borneo and Java and Bali to New Guinea, these Isles of Spice bristle with something stronger than cloves and ginger.

Military airports pop up on mountain tops and plains, each field defended with a garrison and guns.

A naval base in Java is as strong, perhaps, as the U. S. base at Coco Solo in the Canal Zone.

Tough little brown men in their green uniforms and green straw hats, blending carefully with the green of the jungles and rice fields, are being made into soldiers.

Oil fields and industrial plants are defended by wire, fortifications, air-raid shelters.

Harbors are mined.

The air arm, with modern American planes, is flying constantly and training all its available and competent personnel for service in the sky.

The Netherlands fleet—cruisers, subs and destroyers, intact save for a few vessels lost in the blitzkrieg—patrols the shallow waters between the myriad islands that stretch over an area 3,000 miles east and west, and 1,200 miles north and south.

American Plants Help

Behind the military machine, the East Indies government is building a service of supply. Airplanes and battleships the Dutch cannot yet build. Small naval patrol craft they can.

A munitions works has turned out shells sufficient for the life of every gun on the islands, plus an adequate margin of safety, and still goes on.

They were former farm owners, renters, or laborers. Others were painters, mechanics, electricians, and professional men.

The Thysman moth of Guatemala attains the phenomenal wingspread of more than 12 inches, says "Natural History" magazine.

Largest Car Ferry Splashes Into the News

Splash! And the world's largest car ferry, the "City of Midland 41," slides down the ways at Manitowish, Wis., following her recent christening. Starting January 1, she'll ferry a maximum 34-freight-car, 50-automobile, 300-passenger load between Manitowish and Ludington, Mich. She's 400 feet long, has an 18-miles-an-hour speed.

producing.

American rubber and automobile companies have long had factories in Java, and these plants have been thrown into the preparedness effort.

Industrially, the manpower of the East Indies is being mobilized effectively. Artisans that have made temples, carved wood and stone, worked the fields in a civilization that goes back for centuries, have produced a race of men who can work with their hands and so make good mechanics. These are the men who run the lathes and can be trained for duty in shipyards or air depot maintenance, releasing the men of European extraction for specialized combat duty.

Financially, the country is in pretty good shape. It is rich in natural resources, and a rising war market is pumping more money into its coffers, in spite of the fact that much of its trade with the homeland is lost.

It has taken increased war taxes on nearly everything, and will take more. The national debt is low. Whether or not to expand its war effort by increased borrowing is one problem that confronts the government now. To further strengthen defenses, further purchases of planes, machinery, gunpowder and other essential war supplies from America, are absolutely essential.

Natives Mad at Nobody

In only one category, perhaps, is the war effort in this part of the world an uncertain quantity—and that is the type of soldier the native will be, under fire.

Of nearly 70,000,000 people under the Netherlands flag in the Indies, far less than half a million are Europeans or of European extraction.

The natives are largely Mohammedans, tillers of the soil, who live in an almost communal society, slow going because of the climate and mad at nobody. Twenty per cent of them are literate.

How many actually know there's a war on is a question.

The men can be trained to run tanks or complex fire control apparatus in drill. They can march all day on a handful of rice, much like the Japanese. They can be subjected to discipline, and they are tough.

But what will happen to the little brown men when someone drops an airplane bomb in their midst is the question on which the fate of the not insignificant corner of the world is sure to depend.

Forestry Calls on Farmers

Now Is Time to Clean Up Debris and Burn Trash

The Arkansas State Forestry Commission reports that this is now the time that farmers are doing a lot of cleaning up in the course of which they are burning brush piles or other debris, and ask that they remember to notify some forest ranger or other Forestry Commission personnel before the time of burning so that no false alarm fire will be reported by the forest towers in the County.

According to District Forester Russell Stadelman of Magnolia these notices should specify the time and location on which the debris, grass, or new ground is to be burned. The District Forester said that any farmer who could not notify in advance the exact day that his burning was to be done could indicate within 2 or 3 days of the week in which he was going to burn. The location should be given by land numbers if possible. If the person giving the notice does not know the land numbers he should indicate the ownership of land on which the debris burning is to be done.

It was pointed out that this cooperation between land owners and the Forestry Commission personnel is necessary in order that safe farm smokes can be distinguished from actual woods fires. These notices can be called in at some Forestry Commission telephone or by sending a post card to any of the following personnel: Russell Stadelman, Magnolia; Doyle H. Harvey, Childers; Tillman Rhodes, Rt. 6-Prescott; Pete Hay-
